9. Training records and reporting

The HR's training and development section shall keep full and accurate information on the training and development interventions

10. Training and development needs

10.1 Determining training needs

Training needs can be identified in various ways. The following methods will be used to determine organizational training needs:

- Career management
- Skills plans
- Management interviews
- Individual employee interviews

10.2 Performance appraisal

The departmental Line managers and the skills development facilitator are to address Training and Development needs identified during the Performance appraisal/review.

10.3 Training requests/ proposal

An individual or a department or both within Molemole Municipality may also identify a need or a suitable programme that is in line with the job functions and engage HR Department for coordination. Provide the information to the Manager: Corporate Services for further attention.

11. Formal needs analysis

11.1 The human resource division will annually conduct a formal training needs analysis using various techniques in order to identify needs not reflected in the performance appraisal/review process, and assist with long term planning.

11.2 When training needs are identified the human resource division will then coordinate and facilitate training and development of municipal officials and Councillors.

11.3 The Human resource division will provide people with information on careers, training opportunities and other aspects of the work environment.

11.4 Should the need exist, the human resource division can conduct a formal training and development needs analysis to assist the departments with the planning and budgetary process. Various options will be exhausted regarding the most appropriate and cost effective intervention to address a specific training need.

11.5 External training should be considered after all internal possibilities have been exhausted. The human resource division will oversee and investigate options and recommend the most suitable one to address the training need.

12. Training Interventions

The following training intervention may be used:

- Formal training (education)
- In-service training (informal training)

13. Nature of training interventions

13.1 In-house programme

Where training need is identified in respect of issues specifically related to MOLEMOLE MUNICIPALITY , it is appropriate to develop and present a programme internally.

13.2 Outsourcing/ Partnership

Due to social, economic, technological and methodological rapid changes, training programmes must be updated on a regular basis. It will therefore, in some cases be more cost-effective to outsource the provision of training. Human resources have a database of approved consultants for utilization in future projects. Training needs will be evaluated to decide whether outsourcing is the best option based on specialization, technological and professionalism of courses content. The human resource division will identify the most suitable programme and training provider to address the specific need.

14. Ready made training packages

When long-term training need or a recurring need is identified, where costs of outsourcing or internal development of a programme will be too high, the HR Department should advice on other possible ways of addressing the need. The nature of the training and the quality of available programmes will serve as criteria when the human resource division makes a recommendation regarding this option.

15. External training courses/ programmes
